

THROUGH THE KEYHOLE

BY MRS. ROBERT CANNON

THE WEEKEND found us driving to Pine Apple to see Becky and Wiley Stanford for what proved a delightful two days despite the rain. We drove over with Helen and Lamar Rainer and Totsy Rhodes and were met there by Marjory and Frank Rainer of Montgomery and Bob Shook of Birmingham, a most dashing man-about-town, who fitted in nicely with this group that had all called Elba "home" at one time.

Becky's home is lovely—a white cape cod with dark shutters and a columned porch topped by a widow's walk, where Charlotte says "weteke sun baths." The cozy outward appearance is disproven inside where the rooms sweep out sparsely. The large reception hall opens into a living room and dining room large enough to entertain a crowd. The family room is dominated by a brick fireplace wall and rugged mantle. The other walls are paneled and gay, turkey-red cafe curtains cover the back windows. The hominess of one of the downstairs bedrooms caught our fancy. It is painted deep blue, all the furniture is painted white and white curtains stained crisply on the windows.

During our stay Wiley proved himself a delightful host, knowing and explaining the historical significance of this delightful community. We were enchanted by the gracious, old homes which are still enjoyed and lived in today; by the neat little church at Mont Moriah where services are held but once a year and the congregation will be composed of people from many states; by the lovely old wrought-iron fences that surround the various family plots in the old cemetery which is dominated by a statue of one of the founding fathers and whose weathered patina does not conceal the fact that the statue was lovingly fashioned by a craftsman in Italy.

We were guests for the evening at Hawthorne House, a gracious old home which sent off to battle the youngest general in the Confederate Army. The house is true to its select winners from the group was exceptionally hard on every speaker know his subject thoroughly, spoke from personal reference and with the exuberance of youth, made their subjects really interesting.

The winners among the girls were: Virginia Grace Wilson, of New Hope, first place; Kathy Sanders, of New Hope, second place; Meranda McCall, of Goodman, third place.

The masculine winners were: Johnny Lobley, of Goodman, first place; Robert Wilkes, of Goodman, second place; Billy Eageron, of New Hope, third place. Other entrants were: Claire Hornsby and Diane Fillingim, of New Hope; Betty Jane Lee, of Goodman; Sara Nell Mathews, of Goodman; Ted Fillingim and Mike Renfro, of New Hope; and Terry Thompson, of Goodman.

Every parent and teacher has a right to be proud of this group.

SUNDAY EVENING found us at the First Baptist Church for the Easter Concert. We found the music lovely and the choir's selection especially effective as it included dramatic readings by Milton Ward. It was pleasant to see friends and many of the group for the holidays.

We glory in our Methodist on Sundays when babies are christened, and on Easter, when the resurrection is celebrated by the bringing of four precious babies to the altar.

Mary Alice and John Glen Lee brought their young son, dear in a little white suit and a tucked blouse and pearl buttons. Standing at the altar with them were Mr. and Mrs. Fountain Lee and Judy Lee. There to see the youngest Lee Elba. And we look forward to being invited back for another houseparty.

THE ELATION of the pageant presented last Thursday with us still and we believe, with those who attended. The satisfaction of knowing that the long hours of work produced worthwhile results; the pleasure of seeing the church packed to the rafters with people from home and surrounding towns; the pleasure of walking into the church at old hours and finding groups at work with hammer and nails singing choruses of "He Lives," the increased knowledge of Biblical costume and custom that came from the research necessary to produce authentic results; the quiet joy of having one's child bring home from school her Easter picture on which she had attempted to draw the scene at the crucifixion instead of bunny rabbits; these things cannot be taken from us. And to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence we say an humble "Thank you."

WE WERE IMPRESSED by the fine young people who spoke Friday evening at the Coffee County 4-H Cooperative Speaking Contest held at the Alabama Legion Hall. To

National Library Week

April 21-27 has been designated as National Library Week this year. The theme for the week of library emphasis is "Reading, The Fifth Freedom." "enjoy it!" All persons within the Cross Trails Regional Library area are encouraged to visit their libraries during the week of celebration and to use their libraries throughout the entire year. Authorities say that people who read and use libraries are better informed about the exciting changes in modern life. Whether one is sixteen or sixty, there are books, records and films, something for everyone's taste and age at the library.

In observance of the special library emphasis, Cross Trails is endeavoring to sponsor just as many activities as possible to call attention to local libraries and holdings. Already two workshops have been held in the area.

Mrs. Elaine Martin, a member of the regional library staff, presented a program on "Our American Heritage" to an Entertainers Club on Thursday afternoon, and George G. Johnson, library administrator, was in charge of the program at the Opp South Highlands Elementary School Thursday afternoon. He brought a presentation on education, using the sympathy of the loss of our loved one. We are deeply grateful.

May God bless each of you.

on further plans.

Each roomer will be asked to make a poster encouraging students to "clean up and stay clean!"

James reported the suggestions his committee proposed. These included purchasing additional trash cans, assigning students certain areas to be responsible for keeping clean, and making posters.

We hope this campaign will be effective, not only next week but for the rest of the year.

It's getting to be that time of the year again. Time to elect new officers of clubs for next year.

The Beta Club elected its officers Friday. After two days of vigorous campaigning, these emerged as winners: Don Boswell, president; Harriet Collier, vice-president; Sandra Cain, secretary; Bryan Parker, treasurer; and Carole Proctor, reporter.

We are looking for a good year under the leadership of these new officers.

Mrs. Louise Freels has been elected the Beta Club sponsor this year.

Provide A Home For Your Books

April 21-27 is National Library Week.

"Wouldn't this be an appropriate time to provide more storage space for those book treasures?" asks Jeanne Priestner, Auburn University equipment and housing expert.

"If you don't have enough storage space for your books, look around the extension Service specialist at Auburn University equipment and housing expert.

"More than likely you'll build a new one. Eight to 10 inches deep is fine for most books, and 12 inches deep is fine for large books. Care of the largest book."

Of course the height and width will depend on the number of books you have to store and the space available. However, adjustable shelves are essential for economical use of space.

FISH SUPPER

So you had-luck fishing today! Congratulations! No doubt there are more than you want for supper tonight, so why not freeze the extra ones? Just clean them like you would if you were going to fry the fish. Remove the scales and truly one of the loveliest spots on Mobile's famous Azalea Trail. This southernmost of the loveliest spots on Mobile's famous Azalea Trail. This southernmost of the loveliest spots on Mobile's famous Azalea Trail. This southernmost of the loveliest spots on Mobile's famous Azalea Trail.

You will want to put as many fish as you will need for a meal in a baker or similar type pan. Pack them as firmly as you can, leaving as little space as possible between each fish. Then pour ice cold water over the fish until it covers them. Now they are ready for their first trip in the freezer. Place the pan of fish in the coldest part of the freezer. All foods need to be frozen as quickly as possible. By doing this small ice crystals are formed and do not break down the cells. Hence, the juices will not seep out when the food thaws.

FARM BRIEFS
Auto manufacturers used 154 million pounds of cotton last year. The 1962 cars contained about the same amount of cotton material as the 1955 models.
About 97 per cent of the farms in this country now have electricity, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Use a sponge to apply liquid wax. Dip the sponge in water, wring dry and pat between paper towels to soak up excess water. Wet sponges do a better job and waste less wax than dry ones.

Two thin coats of white shellac will keep lamp cords from fraying near the socket. Wait till the shellac is dry before plugging the cord into the socket.

Don't pull on an electric cord when disconnecting it from a wall socket. If you pull the cord, you will loosen the copper wires inside and they may break.

When the floor furnace isn't in use, put a piece of newspaper under the grill and a throw rug over it. This will keep dust and toys out of the opening.

THE WORLD OF WOOD

Trees Save Water!

There are a few columnists who go around all over the world writing about food and it seems to me like they have a mighty good racket. They visit the larger cities where they spend their time eating at all the fine and famous places and then writing about the kind of food they get, for papers coast to coast. It is worth a great deal to a restaurant owner for these columnists to say that a restaurant is a good place. These writers probably get their meals free and maybe a little something on the side if they say something real nice.

What I was thinking is that that is the kind of columnist I should have been and I want you to know I would have been a stomped-down good one because I am food shy and I would have been a stomped-down good one because I am food shy and I would have been a stomped-down good one because I am food shy.

In Chicago years ago I carried a lady friend out to a swanky place. I had heard a lot about it. All he had was a little piece of steak with a piece of bacon wrapped around it, secured with a toothpick, a fancy-looking salad with some kind of high-sounding dressing on it, ice cream-lookin' stuff in a tall glass and a bottle of what I still believe was plain ginger ale with some extra air in it. The bill was $36.40, and I reckon that 40¢ was for the toothpick.

Since that unfortunate experience I always look around when I enter a restaurant and I have worked out a system where I can tell from one quick glance whether I should eat there or tell the head-waiter I can put a while calf in your freezer for about that much and get a bottle of ginger ale for a dime.

The best thing about "atmosphere" is that it's not fattening, but the price runs about a buck a sniff.

Another bad thing about real nice restaurants is that you can't smell the food cooking. They have all kind of exhaust fans taking the aroma out of the kitchen and you can't tell what to order. In the cafes where I have to eat you can tell the minute you walk in the door if they have cabbage, collards, catfish, chitterlings or what not and all you have to do is sniff instead of read. The only time you need a menu is when you have a cold. That is what I call a real atmosphere. The entire place is full of it, at no extra charge, and you don't have to have a flashlight to keep from bumping over tables and stepping on feet. And, when you get your check you don't have to start figuring what you're going to tell the landlord the first of the month.

But, with all the disadvantages I could probably get accustomed to dining at swanky places and probably will right after I make my first million. You meet a lot of fine and influential people at those places. You can't see 'em, but you know they're there. Too, a lot of 'em, might be sitting there in the dark, like me, figuring out how they're going to go about breaking the news to the landlord.

Registration Required At 18th Birthday

(The draft has been extended for four years, until July 1, 1967. This means that the young men of the country must continue to expect to serve in the Military Forces. This series of articles, prepared by State Headquarters and distributed under the direction of Alabama Selective Service Director Ralph W. Adams, outlines the basic responsibilities and rights of young men under the draft law.)

Generally, every man is required to register under the draft law within five days after his 18th birthday. He may register at any local board office, but he should be certain to give his home address, for that will determine the local board which will always have his records and which will deal with his case.

If a man is on active duty with the Armed Forces on his 18th birthday, he need not register at that time. Men on active duty must register within 30 days after they leave the service.

Aliens born after September 15, 1925, with a few specified exceptions, must also register within six months after entering the United States or at age 18, whichever is later.

Any person who at age 18 is not required to register, like a person who fails to comply with other provisions of the law, may be subject to prosecution, or to induction out of turn and ahead of other men.

After he registers, each man is required by law to keep his local board informed of any change in his address, or any change in his personal situation which affects his liability to serve.

Black Widow Spider Poking Around Again

Do black widow spiders send cold chills up and down your back?

Of these do, it's a normal reaction," says Roy Ledbetter of the Auburn University Extension Service.

A female black widow can be recognized by the bright red hourglass-shaped underside of her glossy black body. Males are smaller and have more red markings, but they don't have the hourglass spot.

These spiders usually nest outside, but sometimes they come into basements. They should be found and killed when they do, says Ledbetter.

When looking around the home for black widow spiders - or working in places where they may be hiding - wear heavy gloves. The spiders may bite if touched or cornered.

Here are some likely places where black widows may be found in Alabama: Under boards, stones and logs; in brush and wood piles; in sheds and outside tool boxes; under old papers in the open; inside culverts; in old trash and garbage heaps and in empty flower pots.

Several sprays on the market will kill black widows and other spiders. They are most effective when used on the inside walls of buildings after all objects have been removed from the wall and all the trash has been carried out.

With 2 1/2 gallons of water, use one of the following: 1. 1/4 pound of 25 per cent lindane, wettable powder.

2. 1/2 pound of 50 per cent DDT wettable powder or one pint of 25 per cent emulifiable DDT.

Aerosol bombs containing one per cent lindane are also recommended. Direct the stream on the spider or web.

Mary John Smith Wins In National Tau Kappa Debate Conference

ELBA DEBATER COMPETES AGAINST FORTY COLLEGES

Miss Mary John Smith, an Elba sophomore at the University of Alabama, is doing her share to prove that women can hold their own in debate with men.

Miss Smith scored one point higher than her closest male opponent to win top speaker in four man debate at the National Tau Kappa Conference held recently in Muncie, Indiana.

Competing against students from about 40 colleges and universities, she accumulated the highest number of speaker's points in eight rounds of debate.

Debate preparation, she said, is a routine for Miss Smith who joined the University debate team because of the encouragement of a friend she met in high school.

During her freshman year in debate she was one of the star debaters and was selected one of ten top speakers at the National Novice Tournament held at Louisville, Kentucky.

This year she has received a number of awards, among them, third place speaker in extemporaneous speaking at Florida State University and top speaker in the senior division at Mississippi State College for Women. She was also a member of the first place Birmingham Sweepstakes Team and the third place Sweepstakes Team at the Louisiana Speech Tournament.

Aside from the honors she has won, Miss Smith believes her debating is a rare educational opportunity.

Emphasizing the fact that she receives no college credit for her debate work, she said, "I wouldn't debate if I got credit for it. This is one time I can do something for myself and my school that I don't get paid for with a grade."

She plans to enter law school or continue graduate work in her major, political science.

In addition to her debating activities, Miss Smith is outstanding in women's government at the Capstone. She is scholarship chairman for her seniority, Alpha Delta Pi, a member of the Associated Women Students scholarship committee, and a member of the Associated Women Students activities committee.

She is a 1961 graduate of Elba High School. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. John D. Smith, Elba.
